

PRESS RELEASE

Winterthur, Switzerland – April 11, 2019 - LuckaBox Logistics AG, a Swiss logtech firm developing an innovative on-demand delivery management platform for enterprises, announces the closing of a seven-figure round in Seed funding.

The closing of the oversubscribed round was finalized in April 2019. In addition to existing investors, the Swiss ICT Investor Club (SICTIC), Alpana Ventures and a new fund, DAA Capital Partners, will enable further expansion into the DACH area as well as enhancing the LuckaBox on-demand technology.

LuckaBox's CEO, Aike Festini, said: „Following the latest announcements of collaborations and customers, LuckaBox's standing as a key and enabling technology in the on-demand logistics market has been validated one more time with this oversubscribed round. Our management team is thrilled by the investors' confidence and interest.“

Bertrand Müller from DAA Capital Partners, who has been closely following the successful progress of the company, commented: “Clearly, LuckaBox is well positioned to address major pain points in logistic trends, namely on-demand same day delivery. We particularly appreciate that such a young company has been able to attract top industry talents. Being able to consistently surprise on the upside and to compress sales cycle bodes well for the company's future.“

The funding will be used to enhance and speed up the expansion into Germany and Austria. Also, LuckaBox' growing number of customers requires constant development of their state-of-the art technology.

Furthermore, the company is very pleased to announce that Kenneth Crookston, former Head of Engineering at eBay, has been hired as our new Chief Technology Officer (CTO). Kenny will lead the optimization of a central technology strategy for LuckaBox - both in terms of the IT infrastructure that supports the company's day to day operation and the products they are building in pursuit of our vision.
